To Remove Finger Marks—To Properly Care for Your Feet
Plaster of Paris for Mending China—Stained Glass Effect in Newest Embroidery—Few Recipes—Home-Made Silver Polish.

THE WOES OF MRS. NEWLYWED

"I can't seem to get these finger marks off the door, no matter how hard I rub," complained Mrs. Newlywed.
"Try a cloth dipped in gasoline. It will also clean kitchen woodwork when it becomes smoky and greasy and the backs of chairs when they show the marks from tired heads. Lightly rubbing cleans as well as if you scrubbed hard, with soap and water, without harmful results to the paint," advised Mrs. Newlywed.

THE SICKABED LADY

There is nothing in the wide world of bodily ills that will so quickly affect your temper and dissipate your sweetest society smile, as a pair of sore or aching feet, thinks Nurse. Extremely warm weather, extra exertion, a pair of ill fitting shoes—any of these may be the contributing cause—but the effect is much the same, intense agony and the expression on one's face of utter misery.
Golfers and tennis players, and those who are given to long walks, often find their feet swollen and sore to the touch. Nurse says they will derive much relief if they rub the skin with equal parts of alcohol and the juice of California lemons, well blended. Where there are callous spots and corns, make a poultice of bread crumbs, the same amount of lemon juice, and allow it to remain on overnight. In the daytime bind on thin slices of the lemon and change as often as appears necessary.

THE COOK SAYS

To mend china, says Cook, stir plaster of paris into a thick solution of gum arabic, until the mixture assumes the consistency of cream. Apply with a brush to the broken edges and join together. In three days the article cannot be broken in the same place. The whiteness of the cement adds to its value.
Jars and pickle bottles that smell of onions may be made sweet if filled with garden mold and left standing out of doors for two or three days. When thoroughly washed they will be found quite fresh, and may be used for jam or any other purpose.
When cleaning windows wipe off last with a stocking. This will make them shiny.

STAINED GLASS EFFECT.

Stained glass embroidery may be seen in a library set of table runner and oblong pillow top done on gray Russian crash in bright colors and black. The design is conventional and the color is stenciled on in blocks.

The effect of stained glass windows, says the Philadelphia North American, is arrived at by the outlining of the color blocks in heavy black silk, hinting at the leaded bits of colored glass. This combination of stenciling and embroidery is an excellent means of decoration for a library set to fit in with high, dull wainscoting and the like, as it lends a colorful as well as a dignified note that many embroidered cushions lack.

VEGETABLE SOUP.

One onion, one large carrot, one turnip, one onion, two sticks celery, one and one-half pints stock, small tablespoonful salt and pepper to taste. Melt butter and fry sliced vegetables; add stock and seasoning. Boil till vegetables are soft and then pass through sieve. Boil up and add thickening, and continue to boil till the flour is cooked. (Sufficient for two people.)

HOM-MADE SILVER POLISH.

Put a nickel's worth of spirits of ammonia, another nickel's worth of prepared chalk and a half a pint of soft, preferably rain water, into a bottle and shake well. Apply to the silverware with a soft cloth, leave to dry and then polish off with a chambray. This gives a fine polish and is absolutely harmless.

ASPARAGUS.

Prepare as usual, and cook in salted boiling water. Have ready a hot

PRaise FOR CHOIR IS FROM A MUSICAL CRITIC

The Ogden Tabernacle choir, Ogden and the Ogden canyon are given international publicity through the columns of the August 5 issue of the "Musical Courier" in a section of Editor Leonard Lieblich's story of his recent trip to the Pacific coast and return.
Mr. Lieblich and his secretary, Mildred H. Ellison, passed the afternoon and evening of July 13 in Ogden, as guests of Professor Ballantyne and the Ogden Tabernacle choir. The local stories of his visit were reproduced in the July 28 issue of the "Musical Courier" and his own impressions of the visit are given in the following paragraphs taken from the August 5 issue:

"Through the Sierra Nevadas, covering wide wastes of wonderful alkali desert, and winding up with a forty-mile trestle trip over the Great Salt Lake, we reached the fair city of Ogden, one of the large Mormon strongholds in Utah. Mormons received us at the station, Mormons entertained us, Mormons sang and played for us. We found them to be, contrary to our expectations, a very jolly, very human, very musical and very broad minded lot of men and women. They understand fully the light in which they are regarded by many persons who never have seen or met a Mormon and they are keenly amused at the ignorance which underlies such an attitude. Most of the Mormons we encountered did not speak of Mormonism until we broached the subject for purposes of knowledge, and then they discussed all its phases with refreshing freedom and truthfulness. Playful remarks by myself regarding polygamy were received with utmost good nature and in most cases turned against the projector with keen repartee. One gentleman remarked that while many eastern for western tourists used to stop at Ogden and Salt Lake during the days when polygamy was legal there, now most of them, for some reason or other, traveled straight through and went on, respectively, to San Francisco and New York. An address made at a luncheon by a music editor, in which he began by calling his audience 'Fellow Musicians and Fellow Mormons,' was received so well that a fine mutual understanding was established at once and maintained splendidly to the end of the visit in Utah. When one notes the thriving and constantly growing communities of Ogden and Salt Lake, sees their impressive buildings and municipal achievements, meets their manly men and their delightful women—among whom beauty is the rule rather than the exception—hears the excellent music, and realizes the strength of the belief that brought these people together originally and has enabled them to found a rich and enlightened state in this union, then one is forced to the conclusion that there must be something intrinsically fine in Mormonism when it is leavened with the spirit of this age and of Americanism. In that respect Mormonism is much like Christianity in this country, even though Mormons do not like the comparison.

"We motored about the environs of Ogden and saw the lovely canyon and mountain views that surround the city. The new waterworks also were visited. We know as little about engineering as it is possible for an adult to know and yet be a citizen, but we liked very much the taste and coldness of the aqua pura that bubbled forth from the eighteen natural springs which supply the city of Ogden with water. We liked also the spectacle of Mayor A. G. Fell, attired in boots and muddy clothes, standing knee deep in mud directing the sinking of a shaft in the hunt for new wells. The mayors we had met hitherto spent most of their time in comfortable leather cushioned chairs, giving interviews to newspaper reporters and speculating on the chances of re-election.

"From Mr. Ballantyne we learned that the Tabernacle choir which he directs averages 240 mixed voices. On the morrow the organization was scheduled to undertake a Pacific Coast trip (the success of the trip has been chronicled in the Musical Courier since the writing of Mr. Lieblich's article). Acting Editor with 200 of its members participating. Mr. Ballantyne, one of the amiable Mormons aforementioned, acquired some of his musical education in New York and Europe, but he prefers to be considered essentially a Utah product. 'I have taught my singers as much as I could,' he said modestly, 'and together we are educating ourselves and Ogden musically.' However, the sphere of influence of the Ogden Tabernacle choir is much more than local, for the present Pacific trip of the body is not its first acquaintance with the far west. In 1905 the O. T. C. went to the Lewis and Clark exposition at Portland, and in 1907 the same singers appeared in San Francisco and Sacramento. In the latter city there were 19,500 paid missions at 50¢ each. The choir was guaranteed $3,500 for the engagement, which proves that the local manager banked shrewdly and correctly on the reputation of the Ogden chorists. Mr. Ballantyne informed us that his city is proud of its famous choir and doubtless will undertake other large traveling enterprises in the future. It is to be hoped that some of them will include sorties to the far east.

In the evening we had the great honor to be one of the very few guests at a special concert given by the O. T. C. with the program reproduced in this article. The singing was of an exceptional order, striking freshness of voices, remarkable command of the dynamic range in all its gradations, finely precise attack, admirable diction, and unswerving intonation being some of the qualities that stood forth markedly. Mr. Ballantyne is a true artist with the baton, for not only does he achieve technical perfection and musical delivery, but also he uses the chorus as an interpretative instrument and gets from the massed voices striking effects in color, in emotional exposition and in dramatic presentation. The Gounod and Verdi performances were especially noteworthy in that regard.

Emma Lucy Gates did not sing the "Caro Nome," but instead gave Eckert's "Echo Song," in a style thoroughly surprising. She has complete coloratura control and her utterances are carried forth with truly amazing ease and finish. The voice is of clear silvery timbre. A boon to musical hoarers was the exquisite taste with which the soprano moulded and colored the phrases of the Eckert song, in itself not the highest type of vocal composition. It is a perfect vehicle, however, for any coloratura as routine and versatile as that of Miss Gates. An encore was demanded so enthusiastically that the performer could do nothing else but respond, and she did so with Lohr's "Lullaby," a lovely bit of emotional singing that made a deep appeal. Leon Hoffmeister, an agreeably toned baritone, sang very well. Sam F. Whitaker did some tasteful organ work during the concert, and discriminating piano accompaniments were furnished by Tracy Y. Cannon and B. Cecil Gates.

In addition to the above story, Mr. Lieblich has utilized a good part of four pages of the "Courier" in the reproduction of pictures which were furnished him at his request while in Ogden. Among them are a half-page picture of the Ogden Tabernacle choir taken in the Tabernacle just prior to its departure for California on June 14, with an insert of Director Joseph Ballantyne in the upper left hand corner; smaller picture of the choir taken in Festival hall at Portland, Ore., in 1905, and in San Francisco in 1907; a group picture of 19 young lady members of the choir taken in Ogden for publicity purposes on the California tour; a full sized reproduction of the program used at the recital given in honor of Mr. Lieblich by the choir, Miss Emma Lucy Gates and Mr. Leon Hoffmeister, on the occasion of his visit here; and a fine picture of the Hermitage in Ogden canyon.

SWIMMER SAVED BY QUICK ACTION OF BALLANTYNE

"Good luck and quick action on the part of J. Earl Ballantyne, son of Prof. Joseph Ballantyne, last night at the Utah Hot Springs saved Clinton Driscoll, of 2169 Reeves avenue, from drowning in the big outside pool at the resort, after he had fallen into the water in an unconscious condition. The narrow escape of Driscoll from death, occurred while the swimming and diving races on the Elks "Purple day" program were being held in the pool, where several hundred people were swimming. Driscoll had been in the water a considerable length of time and was in a somewhat weakened condition when he essayed a trip down the big slide at the southwest corner of the pool. Just as he reached the bottom another swimmer, following him down the slide, in some accidental manner struck him a hard blow in the back just over the right kidney. The blow knocked him unconscious and he went under the water. As he arose to the surface, Ballantyne, who was near the end of the slide assisting in getting the racers started, noticed his helpless condition, and pulled him to temporary safety and, with the assistance of William T. Greenwell, secretary of the Ogden Elks lodge, and others, removed him from the pool and to a place where restoratives could be administered. Dr. C. K. G. MacMurdy rendered first aid and within a half hour Driscoll had virtually recovered, though he suffers from considerable pain from the blow he received in the back.

UNION PACIFIC WINS IN FAMOUS OGDEN GATEWAY CASE

Washington, Aug. 11.—In the so-called Ogden gateway cases the interstate commerce commission today held the proposed cancellation by the Union Pacific of through rates and joint fares in connection with the Denver & Rio Grande through the Ogden gateway was fully justified, but suggested continuance of through accommodations for travelers wishing to pass over that route at the lawful fares available.

an order by the commission to compel such arrangements if not already in effect."

The Union Pacific's proposal caused widespread protests. "The controversy," the commission says, "is of importance not only to the traveler, who heretofore has been accorded a free and unrestricted choice of routes in going to and from points reached by the Oregon Short Line, but is important to the Denver & Rio Grande, the principal protesting railroad."

FIRST WARD SEEKS TO PAY OFF DEBT ON CHURCH

Beginning on August 18, the ladies of the First ward will hold a bazaar for a week, in the building formerly occupied by the Utah Light & Power company on Washington avenue, the main features of which will be the serving of lunches and disposing of home-made aprons and quilts. The proceeds from the bazaar will be used to complete the new meeting house situated on Thirty-third street, between Washington and Grant avenues. Brick work on the structure has been completed and the ladies are putting forth an effort to pay for the work on the roof and inside finishings. The cost of the church will be about $20,000 and it is hoped to have it ready for use in a short time.

APPOINTMENTS MADE BY THE DISTRICT FORESTER

The following appointments are announced by the district forester for the local district:
Mrs. Nellie Fletcher, stenographer and clerk in the district office.
Joseph W. Humphrey, supervisor of the Sevier forest, at Panguitch, in place of O. C. Snow, who resigns to become head of a commission company at Panguitch.
S. B. Locke, supervisor of the La Sal, at Moab.
Samuel W. Stoddard of Spencer, Ida., deputy supervisor of the Targhee, at St. Anthony, Ida.
Frank S. Moore, deputy supervisor of the Payette, at Emmett, Ida.
D. B. Bailey has resigned as deputy supervisor of the Nevada, at Ely, Nev.
